

Evaluation of the CREATE Ability 2 Project (TAP2)

The CREATE Ability Project (TAP) aims to promote supported decision making for young people with disability in or leaving the care of the Minister through participation in workshops and camps which are underpinned by education grounded in human rights principles.

NSW Family and Community Services, Ageing, Disability and Home Care funded this evaluation, which aimed to capture the experiences and reflections of young people using the workshops about personal change in their circumstances, such as whether and how their confidence has changed following the workshops, and whether they have been able to identify a trusted supporter in their lives. At an organisational level, the degree to which the project is building capacity across CREATE to support young people with disability is of particular interest.

In order to maximise an action learning approach in this evaluation, an inclusive evaluation design utilising qualitative methods was underpinned by the Most Significant Change method. The primary purpose of this approach was to facilitate project improvement by focusing towards explicitly valued directions.

Research Team

Investigators: A/Prof Sally Robinson (CCYP, SCU), Danielle Notara (CCYP, SCU), Prof Karen Fisher (SPRC, UNSW)

