

Building content with academic integrity

Remember when planning and adding content to your Learning Site that the practice of academic integrity applies as much to academic staff when preparing resources for their Learning Site as it does to any other sort of academic work. This includes correct attribution of others' work as appropriate and obeying the legal requirements regarding copyright. Images, videos and other multimedia used in your Learning Site should be properly sourced.

Copyright compliance regarding electronic unit readings is managed using SCU's MyReadings service. For more information see SCU's Copyright for Staff page and SCU Library's MyReadings page. Also take note of copyright issues affecting copyright material captured by lecture recordings.

The Centre for Teaching and Learning also provides resources and information regarding Academic Integrity and can be contacted for further assistance. You can discuss issues of academic integrity and copyright with your School's Director of Teaching and Learning.
